

UNIVERSITY OF PLYMOUTH
Peninsula Medical School

Academic Tutors Needed for 2020-21

Are you already involved with the Medical School, or looking for an opportunity to become involved?

Would you be interested in becoming an Academic Tutor?

The University of Plymouth, Peninsula Medical School is looking for motivated clinicians to become involved in the Academic Tutoring Service to students in Years 3 –5 based in both Plymouth and Torbay sites.

Academic Tutors play a key role in the support of individual medical students at the Peninsula Medical School. They help define professional behaviour and assist student learning. The Academic Tutor is responsible for monitoring the student's academic progress through regular meetings throughout the year, offering support and remediation to struggling students as well as challenging students to aspire to excellence.

You need to be a clinically active career GP or hospital doctor with a substantive NHS contract. You will also be required to attend induction training.

If you would like to become involved in or would like any further information about being an Academic Tutor in either Plymouth or Torbay, please contact the following:

Plymouth – Debbie Lenton (debbie.lenton@plymouth.ac.uk)

Torbay – Aaron Harding (aaronharding@nhs.net)